

"DIAMOND FIELD" BACK.

John Wilson Believes He Killed a Man Whom Others Confess to Have Murdered—Living in the Shadow of the Gallows.

Twice has the hangman's noose been swung for John Davis, a man who swears he did not commit and of whom it has been reported by those who say they committed the deed. He has ascended the scaffold in the jail yard of Albion, Canada county, Ida., under sentence of death, and twice he has been reprieved at the last moment because there was doubt of his guilt. Even now he stands beneath the shadow of the gallows, with the grip of the executioner almost upon his throat, only a legal technicality between him and death—the last resort of his attorney's application for a writ of habeas corpus in the federal district court.

Davis is a cowboy of the western type, an enterprising spirit who has traversed the globe in search of adventure. He gained the sobriquet of "Diamond Field Jack" by his exploits in South Africa, but, tired of other sources of excitement, he abandoned the attraction of foreign lands and returned to the life of a vagabond among the wilds of the West.

It was while Davis was visiting the Sparks-Harrell range that the killing of James E. Bower, a wealthy man and related by marriage to the millionaire owners of the Sparks-Harrell range, which is 100 miles long by 32 miles wide, and controls 3,000,000 acres, was riding over the range on Feb. 1, 1906, when he saw a sheepman on and a bunch of sheep on the cattleman's side of the divide. He had been joined by Jeff D. Gray, and the two men rode over to see who the intruder was. Dismissing their exchanged the customary greetings and climbed into the wagon, where Cummings and Wilson were preparing a meal. After chatting a few minutes, according to Bower's statement, Cummings and Wilson were doing right in bringing his sheep across the divide to drive the cattleman of the range, since it was thought that he will have nothing to do with a country where sheep have been until after the succeeding season, at least. Wilson replied that he was a small man, and, gripping him by the throat, he pressed him backward with great force against Gray, who was sitting on the front end of the wagon. Gray was buried to the ground, and Bower, who had his revolver pointed up at his head, was thrown across the front of the wagon.

Forcing he was about to be killed, Bower tried to get out his pistol, but Wilson caught it, and the two struggled for its possession. Wilson was a powerful man, while Bower was dated and partly paralyzed. Wilson was just getting the pistol from Bower, and both the cattleman say he said, "I'll get you both." At that moment there was a report of a pistol, followed by a second shot, and Wilson fell dead across Bower's still prostrate form.

Here Gray takes up the story. He says that as soon as he recovered himself after being thrown from the wagon by the impact of Bower's body in the powerful grasp of Wilson, he turned and saw the cattleman say he said, "I'll get you both." At that moment there was a report of a pistol, followed by a second shot, and Wilson fell dead across Bower's still prostrate form.

Other sheepmen were in the neighborhood, so Bower and Gray rode away. Bower went to Ogden, where, on Feb. 5, he told John Sparks, his employer, all about the shooting. This was six days before the finding of the bodies of Cummings and Wilson. This is corroborated by Mr. Sparks, and this, he says, explains his earnest desire to see Davis go free, for he feels that it would be a stain on all concerned to have an innocent man die because of the murder of two men who, he believes, were killed by another man in self defense. Already Sparks has expended several thousand dollars in the defense of Davis and will continue the prisoner as long as there is a chance for saving his life. If Davis is acquitted, Gray and Bower say they would never have disclosed the fact that they killed Wilson and Cummings.

Women Should Know It.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for the many ills that beset womanhood.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffiness or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing-down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in bottles or common glass for twenty-four hours, are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

In fact, women are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or trouble of the womb. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

To prove its veracity, women may have a simple bottle and book telling all about it, kindly mention the Backache-Kidney and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Have You Made Up Your Mind?

What you would like for your new suit? No matter what the style, color, shade or pattern you fancy most, you will get it here. So many men say, "It's funny you didn't have this suit in the window. I could have made up my mind long ago."

Very true, but we can't crowd all our styles into the window. Just walk in and say, "I want to see your suits at such and such a price." The rest is easy.

PRICES ARE RIGHT.

SILZER'S.

COMMENCED!

The work of making extensive improvements to my store has commenced. I needed more room and in a few weeks will have one of the handsomest and most modern salerooms in the county.

Price Smashing

Has commenced. I want to get all summer goods out of the way and to go into my new store rooms with a splendid fall and winter stock. To do this I have cut prices on Summer Goods.

They are now sold lower at my store than ever before. I will not quote prices but ask you to call, examine and ask for quotations.

Father's Journey.

There is a hint in the following incident of the way in which children may be trained so as not to regard death as a king of terrors:—

That night, before they went to bed, they were allowed to go in and kiss their father good-night. This privilege had been denied them lately, and their hearts responded with joy to the invitation. Mamma was better, or she could not see them. The doctor had said they would love him for it all their lives! She was very pale, but smiling, and her first words to them were: "An going on a journey."

"A journey?" cried the children. "Will you take us with you?"

"No; it is a long, long journey."

"Mamma is going to the South," said tiny "the doctor has ordered her to go. We will get well in the orange grove of Florida."

"I am going to a far more distant country, more beautiful than even the lovely South," said the mother, faintly, and I will not come back."

"You are going alone, mamma?" said tiny.

"No," said the mother, in a low, sweet voice, "I am not going alone. My Physician goes with me. Kiss me good-bye for dear ones, for in the morning before you awake I shall be gone. You will come to me when you are made ready, at each must make the journey alone."

In the morning she was gone. Where the children roam, their father told them of the beautiful country at which others had died quietly while she lived.

"How did she go?" "With some of her friends."

"The chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof?" their father told them solemnly.

People wonder at the peace and happiness expressed in the faces of these motherless children. When asked about their mother they say, "She has gone on a journey," and every night and morning they read in their Guide-book of that land where she now lives, whose inhabitants shall no more say, "I am sick, and where God shall wipe all tears from their eyes."—Detroit Free Press.

The article in last week's Meade Messenger regarding the attitude of visiting strangers was timely. We are neglectful oftentimes, unintentionally, in courtesy and attention to visitors, and it is a pity that we do not come again. It is this particular spot that is unappreciated for the responsive, cheerful graciousness of our girls and the hospitality of our sweet faced older ladies.

Gov. Givings gives the Associated Press some plain facts regarding the President's course towards Secretary Alger. He says that Mr. McKinley was not at all surprised at the President's action and asks him to retire and give him his reasons, but accomplished his purpose by indirection. That's what is the matter with our people. They are so much of religious circles. An open, candid, frank, sincere manner is a rare affair. The injustice in consequence is appalling and the result is a social atmosphere of the lack of faith in humanity and a Supreme Being.

Charles Hamilton, Magruder, our Meade county boy and a nephew of Mr. Thomas Hamilton, has written a series of interesting letters for the Courier-Journal. Last Sunday his article on "Louisville's Old Playhouses" was particularly interesting. His description of old McCall Hall opening in 1850 with a night concert by Jenny Lind brought up long remembrances. My father's friends in social affairs at that time and through every year of his life he ever remembered the famous singer and the impression that song and the "old playhouses" made on him as interesting was his sketch of Charles B. Parsons as leading man in the Drake Stock Company. Mr. Parsons was a Meade county native, a Methodist minister, a social reformer, a Methodist preacher. He was an intimate friend of Col. Robert Buckner, of this town and whose funeral he preached the eulogy at. He was a Meade county man. His home was still alive at the Linda Morehead who still lives at the old home street. Mr. Parsons was a man of fine physique and of wonderful mental powers, an orator.

A notable fact in connection with the Congress of Women held in London was that there was no discussion of the moral atmosphere of the stage. It was never questioned even by those most competent to speak from a professional point of view—Sumner Aberdeen and even "ant Susan B." concluded, though that the best work could be done in a quiet, unobtrusive way. The statisticians assert "that the finer and higher education of woman the less likely she is to marry"—not if the right kind of education is given. The statistics of the world show that in all the great women of history have been old maid—Some women have chosen to remain single—That doesn't follow as a rule. Of course that married women haven't done so well. Good to be redeeming the race—I hold fast to the idea that a woman's best, noblest work is done at home. But do not forget that the world is a better place for a broader sense to make a smooth voyage for suffering sisterhood—in no instance need she be a doctor, in all cases a nurse. The world is a better place for a character and let her influence be felt—The Divine spark once kindled at Helen's altar will always burn brightly if the world is a better place for a generous love, tied with laws of faith and truth.

The Farm Journal is 72 years old, prints 40 tons of paper a month, and is out of debt; it is cut to fit every progressive farmer and villager. Don't you get the Farm Journal paper? If you will, pay a year ahead for the Farm Journal and we will have the balance of 1899 and all of 1900 1901, 1902 and 1903. We will have the balance of 1904 to you if alive and anywhere on the globe.

at the next meeting, for the next month, to give their whole time to the cause of temperance.

If you are willing to do anything for the cause of temperance this campaign, you should be at Irvington next Saturday and get our plans or make your suggestions. If you are interested in the cause be there. Go and get interested, everybody.

At the recent election on Local Option the cause of temperance was badly and successfully contradicted. People who voted cast for whiskey, and it does seem that if the laws is properly presented to the people of this precinct, they will be ready to be there and cast for whiskey here Aug. 26. Indeed it does seem strange that any one should favor the saloon.

That the world is growing better cannot be successfully contradicted. People are more moral, more temperate and more religious is higher now than at any former period in the history of the world. It is due to that were formerly tolerated by society meet certain disapproval today. A man could formerly drink red liquor, and swaggers, and could be a drunkard and still be respected at thanks to the women he can't do it now.

NEVER TOO OLD TO BE CURED.

S. S. S. is a Great Blessing to Age does not necessarily mean feebleness and ill health, as nearly all of the sickness among older people can be avoided. Most elderly people are very susceptible to illness, but it is wholly unnecessary. By keeping their blood pure they can fortify themselves so as to escape three-fourths of the ailments.

the strategy which will keep him from being "tripped" by the enemy. He is now "working" on the problem of thoroughly removing all waste accumulations, and imparting new strength and life to the energies, and is increasing the efficiency of the energies, and sends new life giving blood throughout the entire system.

Mr. Harsh P. Smith, of South Boston, writes:

"I am seventy years old, and had not enjoyed good health for twenty years. I was sick in different ways, and was unable to do any of my legs. The doctor said that on account of my age, I would never walk again. I took a course of Dr. J. C. R. & it cured me completely, and I am happy to say that I feel as well as I ever did in my life."

Mr. J. W. Loring, of Columbia, Mo., writes:

"I have suffered tortures from a fiery eruption on my skin. I tried almost every remedy, and finally found Dr. J. C. R. I was told that my age, which is sixty six, was against me, and that I could never hope to be cured. I took a course of Dr. J. C. R. & it cured me completely, and I am happy to say that
